Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for falls between nursing home residents who had fallen at least once during the previous year and those who had not. A cross-sectional survey of 106 nursing home residents was conducted. Residents were interviewed about their history of falling, demographic characteristics, medical conditions, functional status, and social support. Results showed that residents who had fallen at least once during the previous year were significantly older than those who had not ($p < .001$). There were no significant differences between the two groups regarding gender, education, marital status, or living arrangement. Residents who had fallen at least once during the previous year had significantly more medical conditions than those who had not ($p < .001$). There were no significant differences between the two groups regarding functional status or social support. The results suggest that older residents with multiple medical conditions are at greater risk for falling.

"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLD TIMERS

From P.F.O. William Adkins, 2nd Div., Korea: I remember when the country people of Stanford, Ky., didn't buy anything to eat. They just ate dried apples for breakfast, drank water for lunch and swelled up for supper. If prices keep going up, we will all be living that way again.

From Mrs. John Schaeffer, York, Pa.: I can remember when people went around with their arms in splints because their automobile had "kicked" them.

From Flora Dietrich, El Paso, Texas: I remember the ice cream socials when they made the custard from milk, eggs, sugar, lemon or vanilla flavoring and put the custard in a freezer. They put the freezer in a tub or cracked ice, salted—and you turned the crank until your arm seemed like it would fall off. Sure, the tables were all loaded with cake, all frosted too.

From Mary Karch, Lakeview, Ohio: I remember our two-wheeled cart—no back. We would drive to the country store over the hills and mud roads. I felt out backwards with a basket of eggs I was holding open. I know we didn't go on to the store that day.

From Casey Perkins, St. Louis: I remember "Little Egypt," a dancer at the St. Louis fair in 1933. I remember seeing her promoters had her insured for $25,000 against hip dislocation. I don't believe she ever collected, although she dislocated her hips every time I saw her—they always snapped back in place when the show was over.

MONSTER TANK CARRIER TRIES TEST ROAD—This 200,000-pound Army tank retriever was one of the heavy vehicles used on the Maryland Test Road by highway engineers in an experiment which proved that pavement built on gravel will carry weights far greater than the heaviest commercial trucks permitted anywhere.

Motorists today drive smoothly at 50 mph over the site of the road test, despite earlier unofficial reports the road was "ruled" by the specially heavy test trucks which were shuttled back and forth 24 hours a day for six months.

The Highway Research Board's official findings, just released in Washington, D. C., describe how the engineers withheld normal road maintenance so that washouts of clay beneath the pavement would permit cracking they could measure against various weights.

The report shows that the 28 concrete slabs on good soil didn't crack, and the tank retriever was run over this part of the highway to confirm that a properly-built road can support heavy loads.

The inadequate Choptank clay under 85 percent of the test road, it was said, exists nowhere except in a few parts of Maryland and Delaware, but the engineers' findings indicate that pavements built anywhere on poor soils, without adding gravel, require faithful maintenance if rain and weathering are not to weaken them so they cannot bear even ordinary traffic.

The Maryland Test Road was reopened to public use after the state highway department spent $9,915 on it, mostly to fix shoulders and drainage found faulty before the test.

Highway designers and builders are hopeful that the Maryland test and others in prospect will point the way to better highway construction and care. They have learned that a good foundation is a good start for any road.

Fine eating any summer day are fresh Corn Pancakes, stacked in threes and served with a pork sausage to go with each.

Off to a day in the out-of-doors? That calls for a home breakfast of fresh melon, golden-crusted wheatcakes, sausages and coffee. When fresh corn kernels ramble through the cakes, your family will comment that summer eating is mighty good. It's mighty nutritious, too, since enriched flour brings protein, three B-vitamins and feed iron to any dish. That's why corn Pancakes make such a good luncheon or supper dish, as well as breakfast starter.

Use a pancake mix or the recipe below to make the batter. It goes together quickly, so start the griddle warming slowly in the meantime. Add fresh corn cut from the cob for that unbeatable flavor, or canned or frozen corn kernels if more convenient. Bake the Corn Pancakes on a lightly greased hot griddle and serve with a brown sugar syrup, glazed apricot or peach halves make an attractive accompaniment.

Since corn cakes cost only about 2 1/2 cents apiece, you can flip them happily for your family until they say "enough!"

FRESH CORN CAKES

1 cup sifted enriched flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 egg

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg. Add milk, corn and shortening. Add to flour mixture and mix well. Cook on lightly greased hot griddle. Makes about 12 5-inch pancakes.

According to a tabulation by a congressman, one person out of every four in this country is now getting some kind of cash payment from Government." — Fairfield County News.

By LYLE HULL

HITLER successfully practiced the age-old strategy of swaying the minds of the masses by constant repetition. Stalin is finding the same practice very useful, as is exemplified by recent occurrences such as the Red demonstrations in Paris against "Ridgway the Polonoiser." Why don't we use the same technique in a more constructive and honorable way?

From all reports the Voice of America broadcasts to the Iron Curtain countries have changed considerably in the last year or two. At the same time these broadcasts increased to be doing more harm than good to our cause. The reason is that they provide a fertile field for discussion. Then later they seemed to go through an incubation period which conveyed nothing to the listeners. But of late these broadcasts are reportedly much improved.

Now if the constant repetition of a lie can influence Russians, Germans, French, etc., why could not the same effect be obtained by the constant repetition of the truth? Why might it not bear fruit to drum into the minds of the Slav masses the truth that the only way they can liberate themselves from the misery of constant fear is to destroy the brutes who hold them in bondage? Why not teach them to them constantly that no government has ever been so strong that it can resist the determined masses for long? Why not hammer, hammer, hammer "revolt" until the slaves do revolt. A successful revolt is not an impossibility if the people can be made to realize that it is possible.

Today the Iron Curtain peoples live in perpetual fear of the "knock on the door". Before, it was only certain elements which had to fear the terrible sound of the midnight footsteps. Today, it is everyone. The slave quakes must be kept filled or the Russian economy would collapse. If a mechanic dies, his place must be filled. A stenographer, a laborer, a teacher, a cook—it is all the same. There are no more political "enemies" to fill those places—they must come from all the people. How long can a man stand if he is constantly encouraged them, we may save them—and ourselves—from the deluge.

A PEEK AT THE STARS

LYN CONNELLY

TWO BAD BREAKS were responsible for Desi Arnaz' success as Ricky Ricardo in the CBS-TV series, "I Love Lucy," in which he co-stars with wife Lucille Ball. First came a revolution in his native Cuba in 1933 which destroyed the family fortune and brought him to the U.S. looking for work, something alien to him up to that moment. World War II was responsible for a broken knee-cap that kept Desi out of basic training but made him use his talents to entertain G. I. patients in hospitals. His success with such audiences convinced him that his particular path to fame was to have his own orchestra.

Desiderio, Alberto Arnaz y de Acha the Third was born in Santiago, Cuba, on March 2, 1917. His father was the mayor of the town and his grandfather was one of Cuba's heroes who fought alongside Teddy Roosevelt. Three ranches, a palatial home in the city, a private island in San Diego Bay, a cruiser, racing stable, speed boats and motor cars were all at his disposal until August 12, 1933, brought the revolution and the end of this splendid existence.

Fleeing to Florida, Desi worked at a succession of jobs, driving trucks and taxis, checking trains, doing bookkeeping and even cleaning bird cages. Show business finally caught up with him when he got a job playing a guitar at Miami's fashionable Roney Plaza Hotel where he was spotted by Xavier Cugat who hired him to appear as vocalist with his band.

Desi's next stop was in the Broadway production, "Too Many Girls," and from there he went to Hollywood to make the film version of the musical. During the making of the picture, he met Lucille Ball and by the time the movie ended, he married her. Now in their joint "I Love Lucy," they have discovered not only a perfect romantic combination but a successful and workable business partnership as well.

The State Dairy Show, featuring 4-H club and adult divisions, is an annual highlight for Maine farm people. It is held the first Saturday of August at the Windsor Fair Grounds in Kennebec County.

Twin Beauty

Carolyn St. Clair tries out a new twin-cylinder outboard motor that develops three horsepower yet weighs only 30 pounds. This "Twin Beauty" made by Evinrude, meets the need for an easy-handling motor as more women and youngsters take up boating.

It features "fisherman drive" that permits full power operation in thick weeds, and functions effectively over shoals, rocks and snag-filled waters.

Price $148

Also several used motors priced from $45 up
